NEW MOVEMENT STARTED TODAY

Employes' Branch of Chamber of Commerce Opened and Several Members Are Added.

THREE TEAMS OF WORKERS

Two at Work This Afternoon and
Other Will Canvass Tonight
—Many at Lunch Today.

The employees' or secondary movement in the Chamber of Commerce was started today and instantly won a lot of supporters. Several young fellows enlisted in the work at once and the project promises to be even more successful than the first division.

Two teams of men in the secondary movement were at work this afternoon, but at a late hour only one team had reported any recruits. The secondary movement resulted in an addition of nineteen new names today, bringing the total up to 176.

The Chamber of Commerce movement reached its highest pitch of interest when the secondary movement started. Another team of the secondary fellows will be at work tonight, and they will likely have a number of names to report.

There were sixteen men at the lunch today and twelve of them were there because of their interest in the secondary movement of the Chamber of Commerce. Before the lunch today twelve young men had entered into the secondary movement by signing an agreement similar to that of the first set, except that the dues are three dollars a year, or twenty-five cents a month, payable monthly.

The Chamber of Commerce movement contemplated a graduated scale of dues, and it was agreed that all employes should come in at three dollars a year.

The secondary movement teams entered into the project with a spirit that argues success to the plan. They had no more than organized until they began talking of prospects. Two teams worked an hour this afternoon.

The same crowd of fellows will meet at luncheon tomorrow at noon and then work for an hour sometime during the afternoon or evening. This, under the present plans, will bring the canvass to a close and the executive committee will arrange at once for an organization meeting.

In the textile industries in Germany women workers are in the majority.

In all the world there are less than three times as many miles of railroad as there are in the United States alone.

With a population only two-thirds as great as the United States, Germany has one million more labor union members.

Residence of E. M. Kelley is Entered and His Clothing Taken in Yard and Searched.

NOTHING ELSE IS MISSED

The residence of Edward M. Kelley, in West First street was entered last night and between $17 and $18 in money taken. Entrance was gained through the rear door. The robbery was not discovered until this morning when Mr. Kelley went to dress and could not find his clothes. Investigation showed that they had been carried out into the rear yard and searched. Mr. Kelley had between $17 and $18 in cash and every cent was taken. Nothing else of value was taken. Mr. Kelley stated that he locked the rear door as usual before refiring for the night. He nor any of the family heard the robber. The robbery was reported to the police but they have no clue although it is believed that it was local talent.

$5,000 DAMAGE SUIT IS STARTED

Several Witnesses Are Heard in Case in Shelbyville in Which I. & C. is One of Defendants.

JOHN WILSON IS PLAINTIFF

Wants Damages For Personal Injuries Received From Fall in Open Ditch Along Right-of-Way.

The five thousand dollar damage case in which John Wilson, sixty years old, a resident of Waldron, is demanding that amount from the C. C. & St. L. railroad company and the I. & C. traction company for personal injuries sustained on the night of February 10, 1913, was called for trial Monday morning. It was well along in the afternoon before a jury was acceptable to both sides had been obtained and but five witnesses were examined during the afternoon.

A large number of witnesses have been called by each side, but it is expected to finish the trial in three or four days.

Those who testified on Monday afternoon were Jacob Schott, Virgil Cochran, Alvin Jones, Henry Jones and George Jackson.

The plaintiff in the action was injured in the night of the date mentioned by falling twice into an open ditch as he was returning home from church. A tile ditch was being put in and an excavation had been made across the rights of way of the two defendant companies where their tracks cross Pearl street, in the town of Waldron.

Mr. Wilson fell into one opening, the ditches not having yet been filled and according to the allegations of the plaintiff, the companies having no signal light out, and after getting out of this he fell in again at another point. It is set forth in the complaint that the nervous system of the plaintiff was wrecked, that his back was injured and that he was permanently crippled in his legs.

The burden of the I. & C.'s defense is that the plaintiff fell in the ditch on the Big Four's right-of-way and for that reason they can not be held accountable.

Curtis & Forney and Meeks & Hack, of Shelbyville, are appearing for the plaintiff. The defendant Big Four railroad company is being represented by the legal firm of Carter & Morrison and the Indianapolis & Cincinnati traction company by Hord & Adams, both of Shelbyville, and Smith, Cambern & Smith of this city.

MAKING REPAIRS.

Work was begun today on making some interior repairs on the Big Four depot. A large window will be made in the ticket office and a new floor will be placed in the office.

COMICS ARE NOT SO POPULAR NOW

Vulgar Phase of St. Valentine's Day, Which Falls on Saturday, is Passing Out of Date.

THERE'RE 2 CAUSES FOR THIS

Legend About Which Observance of Day Hinges Harks Back Three or Four Centuries.

St. Valentine's day falls on next Saturday and the exchange of pretty missives, pictures and other gifts of similar kinds will be made on this day in observance of an old custom that is almost as general as the observance of Christmas.

The day has no particular religious significance. Such as it has is understood by very few of the people who exchange fancy cards or grotesque cartoons as one way of remembering the day.

The custom arose three or four centuries ago, according to the legend, when old St. Valentine, a kindly anchorite, lived in a very lonely cave some place in England. The hermit's piety became a byword and many persons sought him out in his lonesome retreat to obtain temporal and spiritual guidance.

To each of these guests he gave little pictures, poorly designed and rudely executed, but inexpensive, as mementoes of their visits. This the observance of the day is said to be started.

The continuance of the day, in sentiment, at least, is beautiful as a whole, but a few years ago the day was disgraced by the sardonic ingenuity of alleged artists who foisted upon the people as "valentines" whole millions of cartoons, illustrative of about every abnormal person that the human mind could conceive.

Each year has seen new creations until, at last, it seems impossible, that from year to year anything new in design can be created. Most of these cartoons are villainously ugly and few of them serve any purpose other than being a vehicle for wounding the feeling of some sensitive persons, the meanness shielding the evildoer.

In the last few years this type of valentine has been growing rarer. There are still too many, but their mission is fast dying and there is no place for them. Largely through the good sense of the dealers, and also the good judgment of the customers, they are disappearing and it is predicted that only a few years will elapse until the so-called comic valentines will be a thing of the past.

ATTEMPT ON JUDGE'S LIFE

John Harworth Arrested For Drawing Gun on Jurist.

(By United Press.)

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 10.—An attempt on the life of Circuit Judge Fortune was thwarted here today, it is believed, by the arrest of John Harworth, a foreigner, who was disarmed in the anteroom of the court by Sheriff Shea.

As Fortune was crossing the room, Harworth drew a revolver. He had been pacing back and forth waiting for the judge.

BIG BREAK IN OIL STOCK

New Low Record is Established Today With Opening.

(By United Press.)

New York, Feb. 10.—Further evidence of the startling break in oil stock was noted at the curb today when the Atlanta Refining company sold at 705 shortly after the opening. This is a new low record. It is 27 points lower than yesterday's close.

CAN'T SERVE HALF TIME IN JAIL NOW

Attorney General Rules Guilty Men Must Pay Fines or Complete Their Sentences.

THIS IS NOT CUSTOM IN STATE

In the future, a person sent to jail for failure to pay a fine and court costs, cannot serve part of the time and then gain his release by paying the remainder. He will find it compulsory to pay the entire amount of the fine and costs even if he has served all but one day of his time.

The custom arose three or four centuries ago, according to the legend, when old St. Valentine, a kindly anchorite, lived in a very lonely cave some place in England. The hermit's piety became a byword and many persons sought him out in his lonesome retreat to obtain temporal and spiritual guidance.

Thomas M. Honan, attorney general, has issued an opinion to this effect. In the past, a person fined $1 and costs being unable to pay the amount, was sentenced to jail for eleven days or a day for each dollar. If he served eight days of that time and then paid $3 he was released. Although this custom has been followed in a great many cities, it is contrary to the law, according to a recent ruling of the attorney general, and to gain his release after having served eight days, the prisoner will have to pay the entire $11.

Each day and each hour has something to teach us and if we are wise we will learn.

This newspaper, for instance, is full of interesting information. Some parts of it will be useful to you—other parts to someone else.

Perhaps the most important information is that conveyed by the advertisements.

Lincoln's Birthday.

Washington taught the world to know us.Lincoln taught us to know ourselves.The first won for us our independence.The last wrought out our manhood and self-respect.Let us give to each the glory due him.There is enough for both, and for our nation.Thursday is the day of Lincoln.
And he fills the stage, growing from humblest birth to highest place, to martyred death and world-wide fame. So will he go on growing, through all the centuries that are to come, as an inspiration and a hope for all mankind.That is, if we keep the Lincoln as he was—if we stand faithful at the sepulchre of this crucified one and see that no false spirit issues forth in his stead.In the adulation that is being given Lincoln in these later days there is danger of his being taken from us as the human man that he was and deified into the unknowable.Thus has the world been robbed of the real Achilles, the real Caesar, the real Washington, who have passed from human semblance to fanciful shadows.Let us not thus be robbed of the plain Abe Lincoln. Let us keep the man as he was—a man—one of the noblest of earth, and, as such, one of the most precious possessions of a people.The unfortunate Hector is, after all, the hero of the Iliad, and not the invulnerable Achilles; and by our popular process of eliminating all human weaknesses from our great men we destroy them as heroes we can emulate and examples we can comprehend.Look at Abe Lincoln's face. Nature never gave that face as any indication of a character to be sentimentally etherialized. His habits of life molded its lines in steel. One may control one's voice and discipline one's manner, but the face is beyond command. Day and night, waking and sleeping, one's character is being traced there to be read by all who care to read.And as we must hold to the sad, rugged, homely, intensely-human face of Lincoln, and love it for what it is, so let us hold to him, too, just as he was—the grandest, most really human figure looing up in our history as a nation.With all his awkwardness of figure, with all his homeliness of manner,
with all his simplicity of speech—that was Abe Lincoln.And let us keep him—plain Abe—infinitely greater and infinitely more sacred than any mythological god, or historians' fancies or poets'
dreams.Coming from nearest to nothing, he arose to nearest to everything.Born of the poor whites of a slave state, and inheriting the hatred held by his class for the negro, his hand freed the millions of black slaves.A self-made man with scarcely one winter's schooling from books, he contributed some of the finest gems of the world's literature, unsurpassed in all the classics for depth and limpidity of sentiment.The man who could open a cabinet meeting, called to discuss the emancipation proclamation, by reading Artemus Ward, was the same man who could guide, with clean mind and iron hand, the diplomacy that kept off fatal interference of Europe while conducting at home the most horrible of civil wars that ever afflicted a people.He reached with ease the highest human levels, and on the field of bat-tle he left a record of eloquence never attained by human lips before.But let us not forget that he was human.Master in mind and body and spirit—yes; but only a man.In his brain the eagles of inspiration had their eyrie.In his heart nested infinite love for all the oppressed of his time.In his soul was a pure spring of promise for all humanity.WILL FILE PLEAS

CITY ATTORNEY TO DEFEND.

(By United Press.)

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 10—Pleas in abatement probably will be filed in circuit court here tomorrow by Mayor Donn M. Roberts and the other city officials under indictment for alleged election frauds.City Attorney Batt and Assistant City Attorney May will appear in behalf of the indicted men, under instructions from the city council to aid in their defense "without cost to them."The same resolution which gave the indicted men the city's legal force for defense purposes, also contained one explanation of the indictments. It was the Roberts expanition and said the charges were "false and malicious," procured by the traction company, its lawyers and henchlings, for the purpose of thwarting the administration and preventing the growth of the city."With this in mind, the council started a war on the traction company. The board of works was ordered to open Cherry street, between Eighth and Ninth streets, which is owned by the traction company.
The city claims that the street was given to the company two years ago on the express promise that the company would build a $100,000 terminal."They haven't built the terminal and never intend to," declared City Attorney Batt.Two traction officials had a run-in with the Roberts administration over the tearing up of city streets without special permission from the street department.This Job Lost Its Charm.

raised from $3,000 to $5,000.Option Election at Muncie.
Muncie, Ind., Feb. 10.—The liquor option election in Muncie will be held March 9. Muncie has twenty-nine salloons, all in the business district. Salloons have been remonstrated out of

MEDICAL SOCIETY
DEBATES EUGENICSNot Seriously Considered at Meeting in South Bend and No Conclusion was Reached.

RIGHT TRAINING AT HOME.

(By United Press.)

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 10—Eugenics was debated without any conclusion being reached at a meeting of the county medical society here, attended by several ministers and priests.Interpreted as a selection of the proper mates like cattle are bred, eugenics was not seriously considered.That the greatest safeguard to morality was right training in the home and in the church, development of a belief in God, and development of will power, was the contention of Fathers J. F. DeGroote and P. J.
Carroll and the Rev. G. W. Henry.Rabbi Cronbach stated that he asked each couple who came to him to be married, to present a certificate of health, but that it was a request, not a demand.Dr. C. Terry pointed out that physical health merely at the time of the marriage was not sufficient, that unless their good health was founded on moral principles, society was not protected from the effects of later wrong doings.On the other hand, Dr. S. W. Baer, said: "Physical health and morality are closely allied. I taught school of all grades for many years and have had many bad boys and girls in my classes, but not one of them was normal physically. To be physically

well is to be sound morally."

Dr. W. E. Wegner quoted Clarence Darrow showing that by any proper eugenic test, Shakespeare, Burns and other great men would not have been born."We do not know enough about the laws of human heredity to make selections," said Dr. Charles Bosenbury. "We can only observe and trace back, and find what ill effect have grown out of ill-mated marriage and prevent the union of epilep-ties, alcoholics, degenerates, feeble-minded people and the like, as the present Indiana law now does."Rabbi Cronbach was among those who favored forbidding the unfit to wed. "Feeble mindedness is hereditary and syphilis transmis-sible," he said. "We should act on this knowledge for the betterment of mankind."Father DeGroote said: "It is a serious question whether man shall step in and usurp the functions of omniscience. It is taking a high responsibility for man to say what men shall have children and what not."

FALSE WHISKERS FELL OFF

the United States commissioner here.
In default of $300 bond he was taken to the Marion county jail to await action of the federal grand jury. At the time he is alleged to have passed a counterfeit 50-cent piece he disguised himself with a false mustache and goatee, but part of the disguise fell off and he was arrested.

safely out of the burning building.
Hay, a number of implements and an

The Princess will show tonight "The Cipher Message" a two reel society drama. A full-dress detective story, as original in its working out, and as surprising in its situations, as it is elegant in all of its environments. No matter how clever, good-looking or accomplished, the thief is destined to be discovered. So the cipher communication, like the Finger of Fate, writes another message on the wall. The leap from a fast running street car to an automobile is truly an exciting scenes. A story that will interest everyone. The other picture is a Biograph comedy, "Binks Vacation" and is very funny.

The Gem will show a two reel Rex drama "Thieves and the Cross," for the first picture tonight. Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber are featured. The other is a Nestor comedy "Locked out at Twelve." Tomorrow night the extra big show will be given, showing a three reel Warner feature showing Marion Leonard in "A Leaf in the Storm" and Florence Lawrence in the two reel feature "Influence of Sympathy." Both are said to be exceptionally good pictures. The first show starts at six-thirty o'clock. The story of "A Leaf in the Storm" opens in a New York tenement house where Miss Leonard is living in hopes of finding means to support herself and child. After a series of thrilling events, she is engaged as companion to a rich woman and the two start for abroad. There is a thrilling shipwreck scene and the two women are washed ashore on a deserted island. The Florence Lawrence feature is said to be equally as good as the Marion Leonard drama.

TEACHING BOYS
ART OF COOKING

Class Maintained at Kansas Agricul-

Prepare Meals

LECTURE AND ACTUAL WORK.

Taught to Make Fireless Cooker

Without Expensive Materials

Lesson in Carving

(By United Press.)

Manhattan, Kan., Feb. 10—A class in cooking, for boys, is being taught at the Kansas Agricultural College. The class is open to all boys, in the school, but most of these in the class are students in civil engineering and in the school of agriculture. They are the ones to whom such work will be of the most value.

Fourteen young men are enrolled in the class and are learning the "how" and "why" of simple meals. Several times boys have taken work in the regular classes in cooking as offered in the home economics course but there never before has been a special class for them. The young men appreciate their opportunity and are very much in earnest in their work.

The course as outlined is practical. The first work is on beverages. They are taught the making of good tea, coffee, and lemonade. With everything studied during the term, a short lecture is given upon the nutritive value of the food in question and upon the simplest and best methods of preparation. The boys learn that cereals need plenty of cooking in order to bring out their full nutritive value and make them easily digestible. Vegetables come next and they learn to avoid duplications, such as rice and potatoes at the same meal, since both are starchy foods. After the lectures they get the actual work of cooking the different vegetables and meats. Under the study of meats they prepare pan-broiled steaks, roasts, brown stews, minced meat on toast, creamed dried beef, chops and veal cutlets.

When the average man prepares a meal for himself, he usually cooks eggs. But how many men really know how to make an omelet or can boil an egg so that it will be tender and easily digested? That is the kind of work given in this class and the boys are taught that there is a right and a wrong way of cooking everything and that the right way is the easiest and best. They learn to make custards and puddings in the study of milk, and then find out that cheese can be used as a substitute for meat.

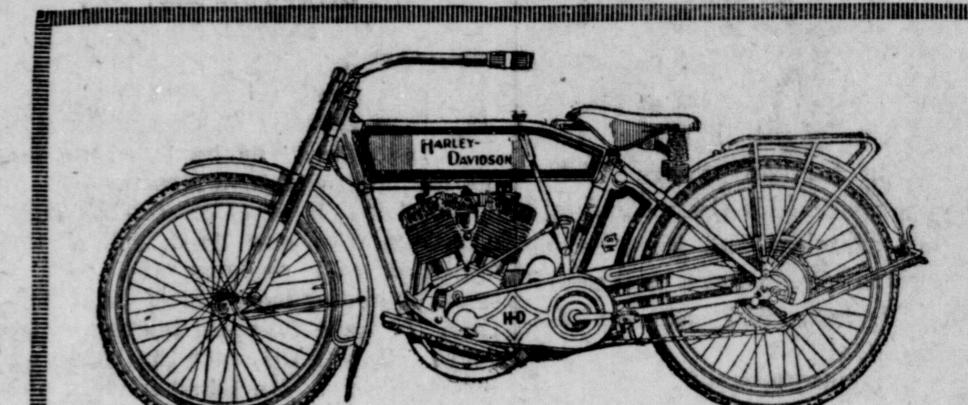

The boys are taught how to make a fireless cooker without expensive materials. Practice is given in the preparation of cereals and vegetables in the fireless cooker. At one period they clean, dress, and bake chickens and then at the next meeting of the class a lesson in carving is given.

Pan cakes, corn bread, baking powder biscuits and ginger bread are made in the lesson on quick-breads and then several periods are devoted to the making of yeast breads.

Several of the boys are batching this year and many of their problems are solved for them right in class. The class meets twice a week, two hours at a time and two college credits are given for the work.

THE 1914 Harley-Davidson is marked for the innovations it presents. Innovations, but not experiments, for every feature has stood the test of months and months of hard road service. The Step-Starter—an exclusive feature—furnishes the only practical method of starting a motorcycle. If the rider accidentally stalls the motor it is no longer necessary to hold up traffic on a crowded street, find a level place in the road, get off in the mud, and set the machine on the stand to start it. A downward push on either pedal and the motor again begins to throb.

Selective Type of Two-Speed

The Harley-Davidson selective type of two-speed has proven itself to be exceptionally reliable, extremely simple and wonderfully efficient. It is built to withstand the most severe driving dust, dirt or damage. Its speeds are selective and the rider can shift from low to high or high to low or to neutral at any time whether the machine is standing still or in motion.

Folding Foot Boards

The Harley-Davidson foot boards are unusually long permitting a great variety of positions according to the height of the rider. This overcomes the great objection to the ordinary type of foot board which only fits the ordinary man. With the Harley-Davidson foot boards whether the rider is tall or short he is not forced to assume an uncomfortable position.

Ful-Floating Seat

For the third successive year the Ful-Floating Seat is standard. This patented device floats the weight of the rider between two concealed springs, assimilating all jars and vibration due to rough roads.

Other Refinements

Over thirty desirable improvements are noticeable on the new Harley-Davidson.

We play no favorites, run no cut sales, but you can buy buggies from us CHEAPER THAN YOU CAN BUY THEM AT ANY CUT SALE EVER ADVERTISED and you can do it every day in the year. You don't have to wait for a sale as our prices are always below the other fellow, no matter what discount he advertises. Remember this and come and see for your self. Quantity counts when you go into the market to buy buggies or anything else for that matter. The large number of buggies we sell makes us large buyers and that is why we can make you a price on buggies that our competitors can not and will not meet; and the satisfaction our vehicles give is the reason we sell the most of them. ## The Mystery of the Boule Cabinet

By BURTON E. STEVENSON

CHAPTER XIV.

We Meet M. Pigot.

I HAD, of course, read in the papers many times of the Gargantuan exploits of Crochard—"The Invincible," as he loved to call himself, and with good reason.

Crochard is one of the greatest criminals who ever lived, full of imagination and resource and with a sense of humor most acute," said Godfrey. "I have followed his career for years. It was this fact that gave me my first clew. He killed a man once before, just as he killed this last one. The man had betrayed him to the police. He was never betrayed again."

"What a fiend he must be!" I said, with a shudder.

But Godfrey shook his head quickly. "Don't get that idea of him," he protested earnestly. "Up to the time of his arrival in New York he had never killed any man except that traitor. Him he had a certain right to kill—according to thieves' ethics, any way."

"But Drouet and Vantine," I objected.

"An accident for which he was in no way responsible," said Godfrey promptly.

"You mean he didn't kill them?"

"Most certainly not. This last man he did kill was a traitor like the first. Crochard, I think, reasons like this: To kill an adversary is too easy; it is too brutal; it lacks finesse. Besides, it removes the adversary. And without adversaries Crochard's life would be of no interest to him."

"I can't understand a man like that," I said.

"Well, look at this," said Godfrey and tapped the letter again. "He honors me by considering me an adversary. Does he seek to remove me? On the contrary, he gives me a handicap."

"But, surely, Godfrey," I protested, "you don't take that letter seriously! If he wrote it at all, he wrote it merely to throw you off the track. If he says Wednesday, he really intends to try for the cabinet tomorrow."

"I don't think so. I told you he would think me only a tyro. He wrote that letter right in the Record office. That is a sheet of our copy paper. He sat down there, right under my nose, wrote that letter, dropped it into my box and walked out. And all that some time this evening, when the office was crowded."

"You'll notice he says it is in confidence."

"And you're going to keep it so?"

"Certainly I am. I consider that he has paid me a high compliment. I have shown it to no one but you—also in confidence."

"It is not the sort of confidence the law recognizes," I pointed out. "To keep a confidence like that is practically to abet a felony."

"And yet you will keep it," said Godfrey cheerfully. "You see, I am going to do everything I can to prevent that felony. And we will see if Crochard is really invincible!"

"I'll keep it," I agreed, "because I think the letter is just a blind. And, by the way," I added, "I have a letter from Armand & Son confirming the fact that their books show that the Boule cabinet was bought by Philip Vantine. Under the circumstances, I shall have to claim it and hand it over to the Metropolitan."

• * * * *

I was just getting ready to leave the office the next afternoon when Godfrey called me up.

"How are you feeling today, Lester?" he asked.

"Not as fit as I might," I said.

"How would you like a whiff of salt air this evening?"

"First rate. How will I get it?"

"The Savoie will get to quarantine about 6 o'clock. I'm going down on our boat to meet her. I want to have a talk with Inspector Pigot, the French detective. Will you come along?"

"Will I?" I said. "Where shall I meet you?"

"At the foot of Liberty street at 5 o'clock."

"I'll be there," I promised. And I was.

The boat was cast loose as soon as we got aboard, backed out into the busy river, her whistle shrieking shrilly, then swung about and headed down stream. There were two other men on board—the regular ship reporters, I suppose.

Godfrey and I stood for some time looking at the harbor in silence.

"It's a great sight, isn't it?" he said at last. "Hello! Look at that boat!" he added, as a yacht coming down the bay drew abreast of us and then slowly forged ahead. "She can go some, can't she? This boat of ours is no slouch, you know, but just look how that one walks away from us. I wonder who she is? What boat is that, captain?" he called to the man on the bridge.

"Don't know, sir," answered the captain, after a look through his glasses. "Private yacht—can't make out her name—there's a flag or something hanging over the stern. She's flying the French flag. There come the other press boats behind us, sir," he added. "And there's the Savoie just slowing down at quarantine."

Far ahead we could see the great hull of the liner, dark against the horizon and crowned with row upon row of glowing lights.

The Savoie had slowed down until she was just holding her own against the tide, and one of her lower ports swung open. A moment later a boat puffed up beside her, made fast and three or four men clambered aboard and disappeared through the port.

The tug from quarantine dropped astern and the French yacht took her place. After a short colloquy one man from her was helped aboard the Savoie. Then it was our turn, and a moment later Godfrey and I and the other two men were aboard the liner.

My companions exchanged greetings with the officer in charge of the open port, and then we hurried forward along a narrow corridor, smelling of rubber and heated metal, then up stair after stair, until at last we came to the main companionway. Here the two men left us, to seek certain distinguished passengers. Godfrey stopped in front of the purser's office and passed his card through the little window to the man inside the cage.

"I should like to see M. Pigot of the Paris detective force," he said. "Perhaps you will be so kind as to have a steward take my card to him?"

"That is unnecessary, sir," replied the purser courteously. "That is M. Pigot yonder—the gentleman with the white hair, with his back to us. You will have to wait for a moment, however. The gentleman speaking with him is from the French consulate and has but this moment come aboard."

I could not see Inspector Pigot's face, but I could see that he held himself erect, in a manner bespeaking military training. The messenger from the legation was a young man, with waxed mustache and wearing an eyeglass. He was greeting M. Pigot at the moment and, after a word or two, produced from an inside pocket an official looking envelope, tied with red tape and secured with an immense red seal.

M. Pigot looked at it an instant, while his companion added a sentence in his ear. Then, with a nod of assent, the detective turned down one of the passageways, the other man at his heels.

"Official business, no doubt," commented the purser. "He will, no doubt, soon be disengaged."

"Yes, but meanwhile my esteemed contemporaries will arrive," said Godfrey, with a grimace. "They are on my heels. Here they are now!"

In fact, for the next twenty minutes reporters from the other papers kept arriving, till there was quite a crowd before the purser's office. And from nearly every paper a special man had been detailed to interview M. Pigot. Evidently all the papers were alive to the importance of the subject. There was some good natured chaffing, and then one of the stewards was bribed to carry the cards of the assembled multitude to M. Pigot's stateroom, with the request for an audience.

Reaching Madison square, I walked out under the trees, as I almost always do, to have a look at the Flatiron building, white against the sky. Then I glanced up at the Metropolitan tower, higher but far less romantic in appearance, and saw by the big illuminated clock that it was nearly half past 11.

I crossed back over Broadway at last and turned down Twenty-third street in the direction of the Marathon, when, just at the corner I came face to face with three men as they swung around the corner in the same direction, and, with a little start, I recognized Grady and Simmonds, with M. Pigot between them. Evidently Grady had been introducing the stranger to a number of typical American drinks—and the result of all this was that Grady's legs wobbled perceptibly.

As a matter of racial comparison, I glanced at M. Pigot's, but they seemed in every way normal.

"Hello, Lester," said Simmonds in a voice which showed that he had not wholly escaped the influences of the evening's celebration, and even Grady condescended to nod, from which I inferred that he was feeling very unusually happy.

"Hello, Simmonds," I answered, and, as I turned westward with them, he dropped back and fell into step beside me.

"Piggott is certainly a wonder," he said. "A regular sport—wanted to see everything and taste everything. He says Paris ain't in the same class with this town."

"Where are you going now?" I asked.

"We're going round to the station."

Piggott says he's got a sensation up his sleeve for us—it's got something to do with that cabinet."

"With the cabinet?"

"Yes; that shiny thing Godfrey got me to lock up in a cell."

"Simmonds," I said seriously, "does Godfrey know about this?"

"No," said Simmonds, looking a little uncomfortable. "I told Grady we ought to phone him to come up, but the chief got mad and told me to mind my own business. Godfrey's been after him, you know, for a long time."

"Suppose I phone him," I suggested. "There'd be no objection to that, would there?"

"I won't object," said Simmonds, "and I don't know who else will, since nobody else will know about it. Good night," and he followed his companions into the station.

Godfrey and I stood for some time looking at the harbor in silence.

"It's a great sight, isn't it?" he said at last. "Hello! Look at that boat!" he added, as a yacht coming down the bay drew abreast of us and then slowly forged ahead. "She can go some, can't she? This boat of ours is no slouch, you know, but just look how that one walks away from us. I wonder who she is? What boat is that, captain?" he called to the man on the bridge.

He spoke with an accent so sincere that I was almost convinced he meant every word of it, but Godfrey only smiled.

"It is a proverb," he said, "that the French police are the best in the world. You, no doubt, have a theory in regard to the death of these men?"

"I fear it is impossible, sir," said M. Pigot regretfully, "to answer that question at present, or to discuss this case with you. I have my report first to make to the chief of your detective bureau. Tomorrow I shall be most happy to tell you all that I can. But for tonight my lips are closed, sad as it makes me to seem discourteous."

I could hear behind me the little in-drawn breath of disappointment at the failure of the direct attack.

A voice was heard inquiring loudly for Moosseer Piggott. I recognized that voice, and so did Godfrey, and I saw the cloud of disappointment which fell upon his face. An instant later Grady, with Simmonds in his wake, elbowed his way through the group.

"Moosseer Piggott!" he cried, and enveloped the Frenchman's slender hand in his great paw and gave it a squeeze which was no doubt painful. "Glad to see you, sir. Welcome to our city, as we say over here in America. I certainly hope you can speak English, for I don't know a word of your lingo. I'm Commissioner Grady, in charge of the detective bureau, and this is Simmonds, one of my men."

M. Pigot's perfect suavity was not even ruffled.

"I am most pleased to meet you, sir, and you, Monsieur Simon." he said. "Yes, I speak English, though, as you see, with some difficulty."

"These reporters bothering your life out, I see." And Grady glanced about the group, scowling as his eyes met Godfrey's.

"I have but just told them that my first report must be made to you, sir," said Pigot. "I was hoping that we might go ashore at once. I have my papers ready for you!"

"All right," agreed Grady. "And after I've looked over your papers I'll show you Broadway and I'll bet you agree with me that it beats anything in gay Paree. Our boat's waiting, and we can start right away. This your bag? Yes? Bring it along, Simmonds." And Grady started for the stair.

But the attentive steward got ahead of Simmonds.

M. Pigot turned to us with a little smile.

"Till tomorrow, gentlemen," he said. "I shall be at my hotel and shall be glad to see you—shall we say at 11 o'clock? I am truly sorry that I can tell you nothing tonight."

He shook hands with the purser, waved his hand to us and joined Grady, who was watching these amenities with evident impatience. Together they disappeared down the stair.

"Come on, Lester," Godfrey said. "we might as well be getting back. I can send the boat down again after the other boys," and he turned down the stair.

Godfrey bade me goodby at the dock and hastened away to the office to write his story. As for me, that whiff of salt air had put an unaccustomed edge to my appetite, and I took a cab to a good restaurant, deciding to spend the remainder of the evening there, over a good dinner.

I ambled through the dinner in a fashion so leisurely and trifled so long over coffee and cigarette that it was far past 10 o'clock when I came out into Forty-second street. After an instant's hesitation I decided to walk home and turned back toward Broadway, already filling with the after-theater crowd.

Reaching Madison square, I walked out under the trees, as I almost always do, to have a look at the Flatiron building, white against the sky. Then I glanced up at the Metropolitan tower, higher but far less romantic in appearance, and saw by the big illuminated clock that it was nearly half past 11.

Tremors of Unusual Severity and Lasting Several Minutes Startle Residents of City.

BIG BUILDINGS ARE ROCKED

Unprecedented Because Whole Laurentian Formation Was Regarded as Immune From Quakes.

(By United Press.)

New York, Feb. 10.—Severe earthquake shocks, lasting a minute and thirty seconds, startled the residents of a score of cities in New York state, Massachusetts and along the whole Laurentian formation north to the St. Lawrence river.

The shock was unprecedented in severity in several places and put out of commission instruments in various colleges.

The quake was regarded as remarkable because the region of the Laurentian rock has been regarded as almost immune from seismic disturbances.

Georgetown university at Washington, D. C., noted records of seismograph which recorded slight shocks, beginning at 11:40 this morning and lasted six minutes. The tremors resumed at greater intensity at 1:34 this afternoon and became very severe, lasting until 1:35 and thirty seconds.

TREMORS AT BUFFALO.

TO PROSECUTE WITH NEW VIGOR

Terre Haute Election Graft Cases Will be Pushed Speedily by New Prosecutor.

CHALMERS HAMMIL AT HELM

Impeachment Proceedings Are Instituted Against Prosecutor Dick Werneke.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 10.—Any doubt that may have been lingering in the public mind that the investigation of election crookedness in Terre Haute and Vigo county was not to be prosecuted with vigor and impartiality was dispelled when Judge Fortune, acting on a petition of citizens, appointed Chalmers Hammil to have charge of the new grand jury.

The court's instructions to Mr. Hammil are to delve into the charges of election crookedness, the charges against the traction company and the complaints of blind tiger violations in Fayette township.

The appointment of Hammil came after impeachment proceedings had been instituted against Prosecutor Richard A. Werneke, charging that Werneke refused to sign warrants when 500 affidavits were filed by citizens against men who had registered illegally. Judge Fortune certified immediately the fact that proceedings had been brought against Werneke to Attorney General Thomas Honan. Under the law hearing must be within twenty days. It was said that opponents of the inquiry will make an effort to have Honan step in and supersede the special prosecutors named by Judge Fortune.

The appointment of Mr. Hammil caused an uproar in the camp of men who have been doing everything in their power to head off the investigation. Opponents of the investigation felt sure last Saturday when the county council refused to appropriate $2,500 with which to pay the expenses of the investigation, that no attorneys could be found with sufficient enthusiasm and standing to conduct the inquiry without pay. Both Mr. Roach and Mr. Hammil have announced that they will go to the end even if they do not receive a cent for their services. Already citizens interested in remedying political conditions are at work raising a popular fund.

AN ATTEMPT TO DEFRAUD

This is the Charge on Which This Man Was Arrested.

Rochester, Ind., Feb. 10.—James Kepler, a Rochester merchant, was arrested and taken to Kokomo to answer a charge of attempt to defraud. Kepler recently traded three pieces of land in South Dakota to a Kokomo man for a stock of goods, the transaction involving $7,000. In one instance it was found that the land described in the deed belonged to another man, and in the other two it was found that the land did not exist. Kepler declares he told the Kokomo man that the title to the land was not clear and received a reply that the Kokomo merchant would take a chance.

NEW MOVEMENT STARTED TODAY

Employees' Branch of Chamber of Commerce Opened and Several Members Are Added.

THREE TEAMS OF WORKERS

Two at Work This Afternoon and Other Will Canvass Tonight
—Many at Lunch Today.

The employees' or secondary movement in the Chamber of Commerce was started today and instantly won a lot of supporters. Several young fellows enlisted in the work at once and the project promises to be even more successful than the first division.

Two teams of men in the secondary movement were at work this afternoon, but at a late hour only one team had reported any recruits. The secondary movement resulted in an addition of nineteen new names today, bringing the total up to 176.

The Chamber of Commerce movement reached its highest pitch of interest when the secondary movement started. Another team of the secondary fellows will be at work tonight, and they will likely have a number of names to report.

There were sixteen men at the lunch today and twelve of them were there because of their interest in the secondary movement of the Chamber of Commerce. Before the lunch today twelve young men had entered into the secondary movement by signing an agreement similar to that of the first set, except that the dues are three dollars a year, or twenty-five cents a month, payable monthly.

The Chamber of Commerce movement contemplated a graduated scale of dues, and it was agreed that all employees should come in at three dollars a year.

The secondary movement teams entered into the project with a spirit that argues success to the plan. They had no more than organized until they began talking of prospects. Two teams worked an hour this afternoon.

The same crowd of fellows will meet at luncheon tomorrow at noon and then work for an hour sometime during the afternoon or evening. This, under the present plans, will bring the canvass to a close and the executive committee will arrange at once for an organization meeting.

Mr. Kelley had between $17 and $18 in cash and every cent was taken. Nothing else of value was taken. Mr. Kelley stated that he locked the rear door as usual before retiring for the night. He nor any of the family heard the robber. The robbery was reported to the police but they have no clue although it is believed that it was local talent.

$5,000 DAMAGE SUIT IS STARTED

Several Witnesses Are Heard in Case in Shelbyville in Which I. & C. is One of Defendants.

JOHN WILSON IS PLAINTIFF

Wants Damages For Personal Injuries Received From Fall in Open Ditch Along Right-of-Way.

The five thousand dollar damage case in which John Wilson, sixty years old, a resident of Waldron, is demanding that amount from the C. C. & St. L. railroad company and the I. & C. traction company for personal injuries sustained on the night of February 10, 1913, was called for trial Monday morning. It was well along in the afternoon before a jury was acceptable to both sides had been obtained and but five witnesses were examined during the afternoon.

A large number of witnesses have been called by each side, but it is expected to finish the trial in three or four days.

Those who testified on Monday afternoon were Jacob Schott, Virgil Cochran, Alvin Jones, Henry Jones and George Jackson.

The plaintiff in the action was injured in the night of the date mentioned by falling twice into an open ditch as he was returning home from church. A tile ditch was being put in and an excavation had been made across the rights of way of the two defendant companies where their tracks cross Pearl street, in the town of Waldron.

Mr. Wilson fell into one opening, the ditches not having yet been filled and according to the allegations of the plaintiff, the companies having no signal light out, and after getting out of this he fell in again at another point. It is set forth in the complaint that the nervous system of the plaintiff was wrecked, that his back was injured and that he was permanently crippled in his legs.

The burden of the I. & C.'s defense is that the plaintiff fell in the ditch on the Big Four's right-of-way and for that reason they can not be held accountable.

Curtis & Forney and Meeks & Hack, of Shelbyville, are appearing for the plaintiff. The defendant Big Four railroad company is being represented by the legal firm of Carter & Morrison and the Indianapolis & Cincinnati traction company by Hord & Adams, both of Shelbyville, and Smith, Cambern & Smith of this city.

MAKING REPAIRS.

Work was begun today on making some interior repairs on the Big Four depot. A large window will be made in the ticket office and a new floor will be placed in the office.

COMICS ARE NOT SO POPULAR NOW

Vulgar Phase of St. Valentine's Day, Which Falls on Saturday, is Passing Out of Date.

THERE'RE 2 CAUSES FOR THIS

Legend About Which Observance of Day Hinges Marks Back Three or Four Centuries.

St. Valentine's day falls on next Saturday and the exchange of pretty missives, pictures and other gifts of similar kinds will be made on this day in observance of an old custom that is almost as general as the observance of Christmas.

The day has no particular religious significance. Such as it has is understood by very few of the people who exchange fancy cards or grotesque cartoons as one way of remembering the day.

The custom arose three or four centuries ago, according to the legend, when old St. Valentine, a kindly anchorite, lived in a very lonely cave some place in England. The hermit's piety became a byword and many persons sought him out in his lonesome retreat to obtain temporal and spiritual guidance.

To each of these guests he gave little pictures, poorly designed and rudely executed, but inexpensive, as mementoes of their visits. This the observance of the day is said to be started.

The continuance of the day, in sentiment, at least, is beautiful as a whole, but a few years ago the day was disgraced by the sardonic ingenuity of alleged artists who foisted upon the people as "valentines" whole millions of cartoons, illustrative of about every abnormal person that the human mind could conceive.

Each year has seen new creations until, at last, it seems impossible, that from year to year anything new in design can be created. Most of these cartoons are villainously ugly and few of them serve any purpose other than being a vehicle for wounding the feelings of some sensitive persons, the meanness shielding the evildoer.

In the last few years this type of valentine has been growing rarer. There are still too many, but their mission is fast dying and there is no place for them. Largely through the good sense of the dealers, and also the good judgment of the customers, they are disappearing and it is predicted that only a few years will elapse until the so-called comic valentines will be a thing of the past.

ATTEMPT ON JUDGE'S LIFE

John Harworth Arrested For Drawing Gun on Jurist.

(By United Press.)

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 10.—An attempt on the life of Circuit Judge Fortune was thwarted here today, it is believed, by the arrest of John Harworth, a foreigner, who was disarmed in the anteroom of the court by Sheriff Shea.

As Fortune was crossing the room, Harworth drew a revolver. He had been pacing back and forth waiting for the judge.

CAN'T SERVE HALF TIME IN JAIL NOW

Attorney General Rules Guilty Men Must Pay Fines or Complete Their Sentences.

THIS IS NOT CUSTOM IN STATE

In the future, a person sent to jail for failure to pay a fine and court costs, cannot serve part of the time and then gain his release by paying the remainder.

The custom arose three or four centuries ago, according to the legend, when old St. Valentine, a kindly anchorite, lived in a very lonely cave some place in England. The hermit's piety became a byword and many persons sought him out in his lonesome retreat to obtain temporal and spiritual guidance.

Thomas M. Houan, attorney general, has issued an opinion to this effect. In the past, a person fined $1 and costs being unable to pay the amount, was sentenced to jail for eleven days or a day for each dollar. If he served eight days of that time and then paid $3 he was released.

Although this custom has been followed in a great many cities, it is contrary to the law, according to a recent ruling of the attorney general, and to gain his release after having served eight days, the prisoner will have to pay the entire $11.

Get All the Facts You Can

No one ever had too much information. Some of us appear to think we "know it all"—but really we all know that our fund of information is decidedly limited.

Each day and each hour has something to teach us and if we are wise we will learn.

This newspaper, for instance, is full of interesting information. Some parts of it will be useful to you—other parts to someone else.

Perhaps the most important information is that conveyed by the advertisements.

They are live personal messages about merchandise and service. They are planned in a spirit of co-operation—to be helpful to you and to the man who is paying for them.

He can only hope to profit by making his announcements service to you.

He believes he has what people are looking for; and he comes out frankly and tells them exactly what he has.

It is the fair and above-board way of doing things. It is applying the first principal of the rule of the Square Deal—the rule on which modern business successes are built.

Lincoln's Birthday.

Washington taught the world to know us.

Lincoln taught us to know ourselves.

The first won for us our independence.

The last wrought out our manhood and self-respect.

Let us give to each the glory due him.

There is enough for both, and for our nation.

Thursday is the day of Lincoln. And he fills the stage, growing from humblest birth to highest place, to martyred death and world-wide fame. So will he go on growing, through all the centuries that are to come, as an inspiration and a hope for all mankind.

That is, if we keep the Lincoln as he was—if we stand faithful at the sepulchre of this crucified one and see that no false spirit issues forth in his stead.

In the adulation that is being given Lincoln in these later days there is danger of his being taken from us as the human man that he was and deified into the unknowable.

Thus has the world been robbed of the real Achilles, the real Caesar, the real Washington, who have passed from human semblance to fanciful shadows.

Let us not thus be robbed of the plain Abe Lincoln. Let us keep the man as he was—a man—one of the noblest of earth, and, as such, one of the most precious possessions of a people.

The unfortunate Hector is, after all, the hero of the Iliad, and not the invulnerable Achilles; and by our popular process of eliminating all human weaknesses from our great men we destroy them as heroes we can comprehend.

Look at Abe Lincoln's face. Nature never gave that face as any indication of a character to be sentimentally etherialized. His habits of life molded its lines in steel. One may control one's voice and discipline one's manner, but the face is beyond command. Day and night, waking and sleeping, one's character is being traced there to be read by all who care to read.

And as we must hold to the sad, rugged, homely, intensely-human face of Lincoln, and love it for what it is, so let us hold to him, too, just as he was—the grandest, most really human figure looming up in our history as a nation.

With all his awkwardness of figure, with all his homeliness of manner, with all his simplicity of speech—that was Abe Lincoln.

And let us keep him—plain Abe—infinitely greater and infinitely more sacred than any mythological god, or historians' fancies or poets' dreams.

Coming from nearest to nothing, he arose to nearest to everything.

Born of the poor whites of a slave state, and inheriting the hatred held by his class for the negro, his hand freed the millions of black slaves.

A self-made man with scarcely one winter's schooling from books, he contributed some of the finest gems of the world's literature, unsurpassed in all the classics for depth and lippidity of sentiment.

The man who could open a cabinet meeting, called to discuss the emancipation proclamation, by reading Artemus Ward, was the same man who could guide, with clear mind and iron hand, the diplomacy that kept off fatal interference of Europe while conducting at home the most horrible of civil wars that ever afflicted a people.

He reached with ease the highest human levels, and on the field of battle he left a record of eloquence never attained by human lips before.

But let us not forget that he was human.

Master in mind and body and spirit—yes; but only a man.

In his brain the eagles of inspiration had their eyrie.

In his heart nested infinite love for all the oppressed of his time.

In his soul was a pure spring of promise for all humanity.

WILL FILE PLEAS IN ABATEMENT

Indicted Officials at Terre Haute for Alleged Election Frauds Will Fight Cases.

CITY ATTORNEY TO DEFEND.

(By United Press.)

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 10.—Pleas in abatement probably will be filed in circuit court here tomorrow by Mayor Donn M. Roberts and the other city officials under indictment for alleged election frauds.

City Attorney Batt and Assistant City Attorney May will appear in behalf of the indicted men, under instructions from the city council to aid in their defense "without cost to them."

The same resolution which gave the indicted men the city's legal force for defense purposes, also contained one explanation of the indictments. It was the Roberts' explanation and said the charges were "false and malicious," procured by the traction company, its lawyers and hirelings, for the purpose of thwarting the administration and preventing the growth of the city."

With this in mind, the council started a war on the traction company. The board of works was ordered to open Cherry street, between Eighth and Ninth streets, which is owned by the traction company. The city claims that the street was given to the company two years ago on the express promise that the company would build a $100,000 terminal.

"They haven't built the terminal and never intend to," declared City Attorney Batt.

Two traction officials had a run-in with the Roberts administration over the tearing up of city streets without special permission from the street department.

MEDICAL SOCIETY DEBATES EUGENICS

Not Seriously Considered at Meeting in South Bend and No Conclusion was Reached.

RIGHT TRAINING AT HOME.

(By United Press.)

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 10.—Eugenics was debated without any conclusion being reached at a meeting of the county medical society here, attended by several ministers and priests.

Interpreted as a selection of the proper mates like cattle are bred, eugenics was not seriously considered.

That the greatest safeguard to morality was right training in the home and in the church, development of a belief in God, and development of will power, was the contention of Fathers J. F. DeGroote and P. J. Carroll and the Rev. G. W. Henry.

Rabbi Cronbach stated that he asked each couple who came to him to be married, to present a certificate of health, but that it was a request, not a demand.

Dr. C. Terry pointed out that physical health merely at the time of the marriage was not sufficient, that unless their good health was founded on moral principles, society was not protected from the effects of later wrong doings.

On the other hand, Dr. S. W. Baer, said: "Physical health and morality are closely allied. I taught school of all grades for many years and have had many bad boys and girls in my classes, but not one of them that was normal physically. To be physically well is to be sound morally."

Dr. W. E. Wegner quoted Clarence Darrow showing that by any proper eugenic test, Shakespeare, Burns and other great men would not have been born.

"We do not know enough about the laws of human heredity to make selections," said Dr. Charles Bosenbury. "We can only observe and trace back, and find what ill effect have grown out of ill-mated marriage and prevent the union of epileptics, alcoholics, degenerates, feeble-minded people and the like, as the present Indiana law now does."

Rabbi Cronbach was among those who favored forbidding the unfit to wed. "Feeble mindedness is hereditary and syphilis transmissible," he said. "We should act on this knowledge for the betterment of mankind."

Father DeGroote said: "It is a serious question whether man shall step in and usurp the functions of omniscience. It is taking a high responsibility for man to say what men shall have children and what not."

FALSE WHISKERS FELL OFF

This Naturally Attracted Attention to Abney's Operations.

Logansport, Ind., Feb. 10.—Louis Abney of Kokomo waived preliminary hearing on a charge of passing counterfeit money when arraigned before the United States commissioner here. In default of $300 bond he was taken to the Marion county jail to await action of the federal grand jury. At the time he is alleged to have passed a counterfeit 50-cent piece he disguised himself with a false mustache and goatee, but part of the disguise fell off and he was arrested.

Women Brave the Flames. Evansville, Ind., Feb. 10.—Men were not at home when lightning struck the new barn of John Orth, a few miles west of the city, and Miss Tillie Orth and her sister led the animals safely out of the burning building. Hay, a number of implements and an automobile belonging to John Orth, were destroyed. The loss is about $5,000.

The Princess will show tonight "The Cipher Message" a two reel society drama. A full-dress detective story, as original in its working out, and as surprising in its situations, as it is elegant in all of its environments. No matter how clever, good-looking or accomplished, the thief is destined to be discovered. So the cipher communication, like the Finger of Fate, writes another message on the wall. The leap from a fast running street car to an automobile is truly an exciting scene. A story that will interest everyone. The other picture is a Biograph comedy, "Binks Vacation" and is very funny.

The Gem will show a two reel Rex drama "Thieves and the Cross," for the first picture tonight. Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber are featured. The other is a Nestor comedy "Locked out at Twelve." Tomorrow night the extra big show will be given, showing a three reel Warner feature showing Marion Leonard in "A Leaf in the Storm" and Florence Lawrence in the two reel feature "Influence of Sympathy." Both are said to be exceptionally good pictures. The first show starts at six-thirty o'clock. The story of "A Leaf in the Storm" opens in a New York tenement house where Miss Leonard is living in hopes of finding means to support herself and child.

After a series of thrilling events, she is engaged as companion to a rich woman and the two start for abroad. There is a thrilling shipwreck scene and the two women are washed ashore on a deserted island. The Florence Lawrence feature is said to be equally as good as the Marion Leonard drama.

ART OF COOKING

Class Maintained at Kansas Agricultural College to Show How to Prepare Meals

LECTURE AND ACTUAL WORK.

Taught to Make Fireless Cooker Without Expensive Materials Lesson in Carving

(By United Press)

Manhattan, Kan., Feb. 10—A class in cooking, for boys, is being taught at the Kansas Agricultural College. The class is open to all boys, in the school, but most of these in the class are students in civil engineering and in the school of agriculture. They are the ones to whom such work will be of the most value.

Fourteen young men are enrolled in the class and are learning the "how" and "why" of simple meals. Several times boys have taken work in the regular classes in cooking as offered in the home economics course but there never before has been a special class for them. The young men appreciate their opportunity and are very much in earnest in their work.

The course as outlined is practical. The first work is on beverages. They are taught the making of good tea, coffee, and lemonade. With everything studied during the term, a short lecture is given upon the nutritive value of the food in question and upon the simplest and best methods of preparation. The boys learn that cereals need plenty of cooking in order to bring out their full nutritive value and make them easily digestible. Vegetables come next and they learn to avoid duplications, such as rice and potatoes at the same meal, since both are starchy foods. After the lectures they get the actual work of cooking the different vegetables and meats. Under the study of meats they prepare pan-broiled steaks, roasts, brown stews, minced meat on toast, creamed dried beef, chops and veal cutlets.

When the average man prepares a meal for himself, he usually cooks eggs. But how many men really know how to make an omelet or can boil an egg so that it will be tender and easily digested? That is the kind of work given in this class and the boys are taught that there is a right and a wrong way of cooking everything and that the right way is the easiest and best. They learn to make custards and puddings in the study of milk, and then find out that cheese can be used as a substitute for meat.

The boys are taught how to make a fireless cooker without expensive materials. Practice is given in the preparation of cereals and vegetables in the fireless cooker. At one period they clean, dress, and bake chickens and then at the next meeting of the class a lesson in carving is given.

Pan cakes, corn bread, baking powder biscuits and ginger bread are made in the lesson on quick-breads and then several periods are devoted to the making of yeast breads.

Several of the boys are batching this year and many of their problems are solved for them right in class. The class meets twice a week, two hours at a time and two college credits are given for the work.

The Mystery of the Boule Cabinet

By BURTON E. STEVENSON

Copyright, 1913, by Burton E. Stevenson.

CHAPTER XIV.

We Meet M. Pigot.

IHAD, of course, read in the papers many times of the Gargantuan exploits of Crochard—"The Invincible," as he loved to call himself, and with good reason.

Crochard is one of the greatest criminals who ever lived, full of imagination and resource and with a sense of humor most acute," said Godfrey. "I have followed his career for years. It was this fact that gave me my first clew. He killed a man once before, just as he killed this last one. The man had betrayed him to the police. He was never betrayed again."

"What a fiend he must be!" I said, with a shudder.

But Godfrey shook his head quickly. "Don't get that idea of him," he protested earnestly. "Up to the time of his arrival in New York he had never killed any man except that traitor. Him he had a certain right to kill—according to thieves' ethics, any way."

"But Drouet and Vantine," I objected.

"An accident for which he was in no way responsible," said Godfrey promptly.

"You mean he didn't kill them?"

"Most certainly not. This last man he did kill was a traitor like the first. Crochard, I think, reasons like this: To kill an adversary is too easy; it is too brutal; it lacks finesse. Besides, it removes the adversary. And without adversaries Crochard's life would be of no interest to him."

"I can't understand a man like that," I said.

"Well, look at this," said Godfrey and tapped the letter again. "He honors me by considering me an adversary. Does he seek to remove me? On the contrary, he gives me a handcap."

"But, surely, Godfrey," I protested, "you don't take that letter seriously! If he wrote it at all, he wrote it merely to throw you off the track. If he says Wednesday, he really intends to try for the cabinet tomorrow."

"I don't think so. I told you he would think me only a tyro. He wrote that letter right in the Record office. That is a sheet of our copy paper. He sat down there, right under my nose, wrote that letter, dropped it into my box and walked out. And all that some time this evening, when the office was crowded."

"You'll notice he says it is in confidence."

"And you're going to keep it so?"

"Certainly I am. I consider that he has paid me a high compliment. I have shown it to no one but you—also in confidence."

"It is not the sort of confidence the law recognizes," I pointed out. "To keep a confidence like that is practically to abet a felony."

"And yet you will keep it," said Godfrey cheerfully. "You see, I am going to do everything I can to prevent that felony. And we will see if Crochard is really invincible!"

"I'll keep it," I agreed, "because I think the letter is just a blind. And, by the way," I added, "I have a letter from Armand & Son confirming the fact that their books show that the Boule cabinet was bought by Philip Vantine. Under the circumstances, I shall have to claim it and hand it over to the Metropolitan."

"I hope you won't disturb it until after Wednesday," said Godfrey quickly. "I won't have any interest in it after that." I agreed to do so.

I was just getting ready to leave the office the next afternoon when Godfrey called me up.

"How are you feeling today, Lester?" he asked.

"Not as fit as I might," I said.

"How would you like a whiff of salt air this evening?"

"First rate. How will I get it?"

"The Savoie will get to quarantine about 6 o'clock. I'm going down on our boat to meet her. I want to have a talk with Inspector Pigot, the French detective. Will you come along?"

"Will I?" I said. "Where shall I meet you?"

"At the foot of Liberty street at 5 o'clock."

"I'll be there," I promised. And I was.

The boat was cast loose as soon as we got aboard, backed out into the busy river, her whistle shrieking shrilly, then swung about and headed down stream. There were two other men on board—the regular ship reporters, I suppose.

"I fear it is impossible, sir," said M. Pigot regretfully, "to answer that question at present, or to discuss this case with you. I have my report first to make to the chief of your detective bureau. Tomorrow I shall be most happy to tell you all that I can. But for tonight my lips are closed, sad as he called to the man on the bridge."

"Don't know, sir," answered the captain, after a look through his glasses. "Private yacht—can't make out her name—there's a flag or something hanging over the stern. She's flying the French flag. There come the other press boats behind us, sir," he added. "And there's the Savoie just slowing down at quarantine."

Far ahead we could see the great hull of the liner, dark against the horizon and crowded with row upon row of glowing lights.

The Savoie had slowed down until she was just holding her own against the tide, and one of her lower ports swung open. A moment later a boat puffed up beside her, made fast and three or four men clambered aboard and disappeared through the port.

The tug from quarantine dropped astern and the French yacht took her place. After a short colloquy one man from her was helped aboard the Savoie. Then it was our turn, and a moment later Godfrey and I and the other two men were aboard the liner.

My companions exchanged greetings with the officer in charge of the open port, and then we hurried forward along a narrow corridor, smelling of rubber and heated metal, then up stair after stair, until at last we came to the main companionway. Here the two men left us, to seek certain distinguished passengers. Godfrey stopped in front of the purser's office and passed his card through the little window to the man inside the cage.

"I should like to see M. Pigot of the Paris detective force," he said. "Perhaps you will be so kind as to have a steward take my card to him?"

"That is unnecessary, sir," replied the purser courteously. "That is M. Pigot—yonder—the gentleman with the white hair, with his back to us. You will have to wait for a moment, however. The gentleman speaking with him is from the French consulate and has but this moment come aboard."

I could not see Inspector Pigot's face, but I could see that he held himself erect, in a manner bespeaking military training. The messenger from the legation was a youngish man, with waxed mustache and wearing an eyeglass. He was greeting M. Pigot at the moment and, after a word or two, produced from an inside pocket an official looking envelope, tied with red tape and secured with an immense red seal.

M. Pigot looked at it an instant, while his companion added a sentence in his ear. Then, with a nod of assent, the detective turned down one of the passageways, the other man at his heels.

"Official business, no doubt," commented the purser. "He will, no doubt, soon be disengaged."

In fact, for the next twenty minutes reporters from the other papers kept arriving, till there was quite a crowd before the purser's office. And from nearly every paper a special man had been detailed to interview M. Pigot. Evidently all the papers were alive to the importance of the subject. There was some good natured chaffing, and then one of the stewards was bribed to carry the cards of the assembled multitude to M. Pigot's stateroom, with the request for an audience.

The steward went away laughing and came back presently to say that M. Pigot would be pleased to see us in a few minutes. But when five minutes more passed and he did not appear impatience broke out anew. The lords of the press were not accustomed to being kept waiting.

"I move we storm his castle," suggested one man.

And just then, M. Pigot himself stepped out into the companionway. In an instant he was surrounded.

"My good friends of the press," he said, speaking slowly, but with only the faintest accent, "you will pardon me for keeping you in waiting, but I had some matters of the first importance to attend to, and also my bag to pack. Steward," he added, "you will find my bag outside of my stateroom door. Please bring it here, so that I may be ready to go ashore at once."

The steward hurried away, and M. Pigot turned back to us.

It was Godfrey that the position of spokesman naturally fell.

"We wish first to welcome you to America, M. Pigot," he said, "and to hope that you will have a pleasant and interesting stay in our country. We hope that with your assistance our police may be able to solve the mystery surrounding the death of the three men recently killed here, and to arrest the murderer. Of themselves they seem to be able to do nothing."

M. Pigot spread out his hands with a little deprecating gesture.

"I also hope we may be successful," he said, "but if your police have not been, my poor help will be of little account."

He spoke with an accent so sincere that I was almost convinced he meant every word of it, but Godfrey only smiled.

"It is a proverb," he said, "that the French police are the best in the world. You, no doubt, have a theory in regard to the death of these men?"

"I fear it is impossible, sir," said M. Pigot regretfully, "to answer that question at present, or to discuss this case with you. I have my report first to make to the chief of your detective bureau. Tomorrow I shall be most happy to tell you all that I can. But for tonight my lips are closed, sad as he called to the man on the bridge."

it makes me to seem discourteous." I could hear behind me the little drawn breath of disappointment at the failure of the direct attack.

A voice was heard inquiring loudly for Moosser Pigott. I recognized that voice, and so did Godfrey, and I saw the cloud of disappointment which fell upon his face. An instant later Grady, with Simmonds in his wake, elbowed his way through the group.

"Moosser Pigott!" he cried, and enveloped the Frenchman's slender hand in his great paw and gave it a squeeze which was no doubt painful.

"Glad to see you, sir. Welcome to our city, as we say over here in America. I certainly hope you can speak English, for I don't know a word of your language. I'm Commissioner Grady, in charge of the detective bureau, and this is Simmonds, one of my men."

M. Pigot's perfect sniveling was not even ruffled.

"I am most pleased to meet you, sir, and you, Monsieur Simmon." he said. "Yes, I speak English, though, as you see, with some difficulty."

"These reporters bothering your life out, I see." And Grady glanced about the group, scowling as his eyes met Godfrey's.

"I have but just told them that my first report must be made to you, sir," said M. Pigot. "I was hoping that we might go ashore at once. I have my papers ready for you!"

"All right," agreed Grady. "And after I've looked over your papers I'll show you Broadway, and I'll bet you agree with me that it beats anything in gay Paree. Our boat's waiting, and we can start right away. This your bag? Yes? Bring it along, Simmonds." And Grady started for the stair.

But the attentive steward got ahead of Simmonds.

M. Pigot turned to us with a little smile.

He shook hands with the purser, waved his hand to us and joined Grady, who was watching these amenities with evident impatience. Together they disappeared down the stair.

"Come on, Lester," Godfrey said, "we might as well be getting back. I can send the boat down again after the other boys," and he turned down the stair.

Godfrey bade me goodby at the dock and hastened away to the office to write his story. As for me, that whiff of salt air had put an unaccustomed edge to my appetite, and I took a cab to a good restaurant, deciding to spend the remainder of the evening there, over a good dinner.

I ambled through the dinner in a fashion so leisurely and trifled so long over coffee and cigarette that it was far past 10 o'clock when I came out into Forty-second street. After an instant's hesitation I decided to walk home and turned back toward Broadway, already filling with the after-theater crowd.

Reaching Madison square, I walked out under the trees, as I almost always do, to have a look at the Flatiron building, white against the sky. Then I glanced up at the Metropolitan tower, higher but far less romantic in appearance, and saw by the big illuminated clock that it was nearly half past 11.

I crossed back over Broadway at last and turned down Twenty-third street in the direction of the Marathon, when, just at the corner I came face to face with three men as they swung around the corner in the same direction, and, with a little start, I recognized Grady and Simmonds, with M. Pigot between them. Evidently Grady had been introducing the stranger to a number of typical American drinks—and the result of all this was that Grady's legs wobbled perceptibly. As a matter of racial comparison, I glanced at M. Pigot's, but they seemed in every way normal.

"Hello, Lester," said Simmonds in a voice which showed that he had not wholly escaped the influences of the evening's celebration, and even Grady condescended to nod, from which I inferred that he was feeling very unusually happy.

"Hello, Simmonds," I answered, and as I turned westward with them, he dropped back and fell into step beside me.

"Piggott is certainly a wonder," he said. "A regular sport—wanted to see everything and taste everything. He says Paris ain't in the same class with this town."

"Where are you going now?" I asked.

"We're going round to the station. Piggott says he's got a sensation up his sleeve for us—it's got something to do with that cabinet."

"With the cabinet?"

"Yes; that shiny thing Godfrey got me to lock up in a cell."

"Simmonds," I said seriously, "does Godfrey know about this?"

"No," said Simmonds, looking a little uncomfortable. "I told Gr

EAST IS SHAKEN BY QUAKES TODAY

Tremors of Unusual Severity and Lasting Several Minutes Startle Residents of City.

BIG BUILDINGS ARE ROCKED

Unprecedented Because Whole Laurentian Formation Was Regarded as Immune From Quakes.

(By United Press.)

New York, Feb. 10.—Severe earthquake shocks, lasting a minute and thirty seconds, startled the residents of a score of cities in New York state, Massachusetts and along the whole Laurentian formation north to the St. Lawrence river.

The shock was unprecedented in severity in several places and put out of commission instruments in various colleges.

The quake was regarded as remarkable because the region of the Laurentian rock has been regarded as almost immune from seismic disturbances.

Georgetown university at Washington, D. C., noted records of seismograph which recorded slight shocks, beginning at 11:40 this morning and lasted six minutes. The tremors resumed at greater intensity at 1:34 this afternoon and became very severe, lasting until 1:35 and thirty seconds.

LOCALS EXPECT VERY FAST GAME

R. H. S. Basketball Team Will Play the Shelbyville H. S. Here Tomorrow Night.

CLOSE GAME EXPECTED

The Rushville high school basketball team will meet the fast Shelbyville high school team at the Graham building Wednesday night. The local team is in excellent shape and after their victory over Cinnersville of last week, they have great prospects of winning tomorrow night. The local team, according to Coach Snelser, was never in better shape. The boys have been practicing very diligently for the past few days and have showed good work.

The local team will line-up in the regular position with the probable exception of Simmes, who sustained a badly bruised upper lip, in the game last Friday. Frazier will probably play this position. The Shelbyville team will present their strongest line-up for the game and it will be very close. A large bunch of rooters will accompany the team here. The Rushville team will go to Franklin next Friday night, where they will meet the team of that city.

ORANGE WON.

The Orange Independent basketball team defeated the Alquina team, 34 to 15. The game was fast and well played, with the Orange team in the lead all the way. Superior team work and better guarding enabled the Orange team to pile up the score. The two teams will meet in a return game, the next contest to be played in Cinnersville.

TO PROSECUTE WITH NEW VIGOR

Terre Haute Election Graft Cases Will be Pushed Speedily by New Prosecutor.

CHALMERS HAMMIL AT HELM

Impeachment Proceedings Are Instituted Against Prosecutor Dick Werneke.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 10.—Any doubt that may have been lingering in the public mind that the investigation of election crookedness in Terre Haute and Vigo county was not to be prosecuted with vigor and impartiality was dispelled when Judge Fortune, acting on petition of citizens, appointed Chalmers Hammil to have charge of the new grand jury.

The court's instructions to Mr. Hammil are to delve into the charges of election crookedness, the charges against the traction company and the complaints of blind tiger violations in Fayette township.

The appointment of Hammil came after impeachment proceedings had been instituted against Prosecutor Richard A. Werneke, charging that Werneke refused to sign warrants when 50 affidavits were filed by citizens against men who had registered illegally. Judge Fortune certified immediately the fact that proceedings had been brought against Werneke to Attorney General Thomas Honan. Under the law hearing must be within twenty days. It was said that opponents of the inquiry will make an effort to have Honan step in and supersede the special prosecutors named by Judge Fortune.

The appointment of Mr. Hammil caused an uproar in the camp of men who have been doing everything in their power to head off the investigation. Opponents of the investigation felt sure last Saturday when the county council refused to appropriate $2,500 with which to pay the expenses of the investigation, that no attorneys could be found with sufficient enthusiasm and standing to conduct the inquiry without pay. Both Mr. Roach and Mr. Hammil have announced that they will go to the end even if they do not receive a cent for their services. Already citizens interested in remedying political conditions are at work raising a popular fund.

AN ATTEMPT TO DEFRAUD

This Is the Charge on Which This Man Was Arrested.

Rochester, Ind., Feb. 10.—James Kepler, a Rochester merchant, was arrested and taken to Kokomo to answer a charge of attempt to defraud. Kepler recently traded three pieces of land in South Dakota to a Kokomo man for a stock of goods, the transaction involving $7,000. In one instance it was found that the land described in the deed belonged to another man, and in the other two it was found that the land did not exist. Kepler declares he told the Kokomo man that the title to the land was not clear and received a reply that the Kokomo merchant would take a chance.
